A two-day International Conference on the theme “Internationalization of Management Development and South Asian Response” in association with AMDISA was held at the School of Management Studies, University of Hyderabad on 11-12 April, 2014. The Conference aimed at enabling the senior management academics in South Asia to share their experiences and responses to emerging challenges from internationalization of management education, research, training (development) and consultancy. The Vice Chancellors, Deans and Directors of several Business Schools from South Asian nations attended the Conference. The key takeaways from the Conference included:

(i) Valuable thoughts, ideas and practices on contemporary developments in global evolution of Management Development and South Asian Response. The sub-themes of the Conference covered Education, Training, Consultancy and Research.

(ii) A networking opportunity to strike alliances, collaborations and cooperation agreements amongst Business Schools in South Asia.

(iii) An action plan to internationalize the regional aspirations with global demands.

The conference was structured in the form of four panels with an inaugural and a valedictory session. A total of about 80 participants from SAARC member countries including India, attended the two-day event.

Inaugural Session: The Inaugural session was presided over by Professor Ramakrishna Ramaswamy, Hon’ble Vice Chancellor, University of Hyderabad. The Chief Guest of the inaugural session was Mr. Mohammad Ibrahim Ghafoori, Director (HRT), SAARC.

Tribute to Mrs. Purnima Sinha, wife of late Dr Dharni P Sinha
It is with deep regret that we inform about the passing away of Mrs. Purnima Sinha, wife of late Dr Dharni P Sinha, on Tuesday, 29th April, 2014 afternoon. AMDISA members and Secretariat staff consoled the death of Mrs. Purnima Sinha.
AMDISA misses her very much. Late Mrs. Sinha was closely associated with AMDISA since its inception in their house. She was actively involved in encouraging and supporting the AMDISA activities. The staff recalled with affection the interactions with Mrs. Purnima Sinha whenever she visited the AMDISA Secretariat and the maternal touch she lent by her presence. She had unbounded affection for all those who approached her and displayed a very compassionate demeanor.
May her soul rest in peace!

8th Death Anniversary of Late Dr. Dharni P Sinha, Founder President of AMDISA, was observed on 9th May, 2014 at AMDISA Secretariat, Hyderabad.

The Meeting began with several participants briefly recalling their personal, memorable and warm experiences with Dr Dharni Sinha. Prof Ajit Rangnekar, in the Chair, and Dr Padam suggested that some memorable photographs of a few major AMDISA functions and Dr Dharni Sinha may be suitably displayed in the Secretariat building.
Thereafter, the meeting began with discussions on the theme for the meeting, STRENGTHENING AND EXPANDING AMDISA, moderated by Prof Waqif. The brainstorming discussions took place.

The following points of consensus emerged from the discussions for consideration of AMDISA Executive Board, Secretariat, and the larger AMDISA community.

On EXPANDING AMDISA membership and network:
- To strengthen and add to services offered by AMDISA, to attract more institutional members across the region. These could include organizational and other support from AMDISA and members for regional workshops on faculty development, training of trainers, case development, leadership in management schools, organizing MDPs and consultancies, curriculum development in international and regional perspectives.
- To attract as members more management schools in public universities in India and other South Asian countries.

On STRENGTHENING AMDISA:
- To expand the pool of peer reviewers for SAQS through more frequent regional workshops on Quality. Prof Waqif suggested an expert evaluation study on perceived benefits of SAQS by SAQS accredited institutions to-date.
- To strengthen interactions and relationships with AACSB, AMBA, EFMD, to promote SAQS accreditation as an intermediate qualifying factor for accreditation by them.
- To seek international sponsorship for and revive regional doctoral and post-doctoral fellowship programmes, earlier sponsored by the Commonwealth Secretariat.
- To facilitate cross-country regional research projects by facilitating international funding.
- To seek funding for and organize annual/biennial Dr Dharni Sinha Memorial Lectures by inviting eminent management academics/practitioners/government functionaries.
- To promote and financially facilitate cross-country student exchanges/internships within the region, with the support of members, AMDISA acting as a coordinating and clearing house.
- To interact with and suitably influence national bodies regulating management education.
- To promote effective interactions and cooperation among sub-national, national and regional (SAARC) chambers of commerce and industry, especially to facilitate regular institutionalized sharing of macro-economic policy developments and micro-opportunities for cross-country trade and investment.
- To institutionalize a culture of rotation of peers, by 4-year terms of chairpersons and members of all AMDISA committees and editors of AMDISA publications, subject to extensions approved by the Executive Board.

AMDISA Value Based Services for Members

Member Institutions have been approaching AMDISA in the recent past with a view to facilitating inter-institutional connection for professional services. AMDISA is happy to provide such specific value based services to member institutions as done recently where AMDISA facilitated an interconnection between two institutions for curriculum development.

AMDISA by way of further promoting the spread of management education also proposes to be a catalyst in promoting inter-country fellowships and internships. The procedural aspects in this regard will be circulated through AMDISA website as well as the Newsletter in due course.

Latest AMDISA Publication

The latest publication of AMDISA “Developing South Asia as a Global Hub of Management Professionals – Role of Management Education” edited by Ashok Joshi, et al., is the culmination of the biennial 12th South Asian Management Forum held between

Session Presided by Prof. Ajit Rangnekar, Dean, ISB, Hyderabad
February 14-16, 2013 at Pune, India. The theme of the South Asian Management Forum being addressed to the issue of creating a global hub of management professionals with reference to South Asian Region, it has added significance in the wake of emergence of South Asia as a major training and industrial region. It is generally recognized that 21st Century promises to be an Asian Century where South Asia is destined to play an important role in various spheres particularly in the world economic order and professional management education.

53 abstracts pertaining to the following subthemes have been published - (A) South Asia – The Emerging World Knowledge Region – Prospects, Potential and Performance in Management Thought and Practice, (B) Creating a South Asian Global Hub for Management Education and Training – Strengths and Opportunities, (C) Developing World-class Management Education in South Asia, (D) Leveraging Technology – Advantage South Asia in Making the World Boundary less. Abstracts were received from all South Asian Countries. Varied and interesting subjects have been dealt with in the publication which is a compilation of the papers presented on the themes mentioned above. They range from specific topics related to industry/sector such as Insurance, Banking etc., to a comparative study of top business schools with reference to quality, to integration of teaching and research for developing world-class education, to corporate governance and the role of Independent directors in China and India, family business, towards a cultural theory of management education, to name a few. It is interesting to note that a couple of papers are addressed to management education for auditors and engineers as professional categories. In the following sections, some abstracts are briefly noted in order to provide insights into their variety and significance.

This volume will be of interest not only to academics and students of management but also to the practitioners. In fact, the papers included in it go beyond South Asia and will be of interest to management professionals every where.

ASBM, Bhubaneswar

The three-day 4th International Management Convention-IMC’2014, organized by Asian School of Business Management (ASBM), concluded on the 8th of February, 2014. Speaking at the valedictory ceremony of IMC’14, Regional Director, Reserve Bank of India, Shri P K Jena said, “To deal with global economic meltdown, companies should adopt survival strategy. Adaptability is one of the most important factors to survive in the global business world.” Expressing concern over the erosion of human values, Shri S K Rath, Director (HR), Odisha Power Transmission Corporation Limited said, “Greater urgency is needed to fight against some issues like poverty, unemployment, cyber crime, climate change, etc. Robust economic policy should be made to deal with economic crisis.” Addressing students at the valedictory ceremony, Prof.(Dr.) Omkar Nath Mohanty, Former Vice Chancellor, Biju Patnaik University of Technology, said, “There is a need to accelerate our ability to innovate new things. Innovation in field of transport, education, health, industry should be given priority.” “Indian business schools should have the international approach. There is a need to update the infrastructure with global standard and develop robust pedagogy in emerging business schools to generate skilled management professional,” said Founder and Director ASBM Prof. Dr. Biswajeet Pattanayak.

The three-day event was inaugurated by Shri M Bhagavanta Rao, Managing Director, State Bank of Hyderabad on Thursday, 6th February, 2014. While inaugurating the three-day event, Shri Rao said, “Management institutes of the country should internationalize their approach to equip students to become global managers.” “ASBM is one of the best Management B-Schools of the Country with international standard. Students should take advantage of expertise and world class facilities available at this prestigious institute,” he said.

“Country has a sizable youth population. Young workforce means having more innovative minds. So stress should be given to generate more skilled workforce. A growing and skilled workforce is an advantage for both the manufacturing and services sectors,” said Shri DS Ravindra Raju, Chief Operating Officer, Paradeep Phosphates Ltd, while addressing the students during the inaugural ceremony.

Addressing the next-gen leaders on the inaugural day Prof. Oopali Operajita, Senior Policy and International Affairs Adviser Chair, The AI Gore Sustainable Technology Venture Competition & Distinguished fellow, Carnegie Mellon University, USA said, “It is a crucial task to scale up the potential of people entering in to the workforce, it is possible only through the quality education.

Speaking at the inaugural ceremony, Shri Rajesh Sharma, Director–HR, Odisha Hydro Power Corporation Ltd said, “Apart from academic curricula, weightage should be given to develop creative ability, soft skill and capacity to work in an unstructured environment among the students.”

IMC-14 book ‘Business of Being in Business: New Prospectives’ and Phoenix were released, whereas as many as 28 papers were presented.

Intellectuals from across the globe including countries like USA, Nepal, France had come together to attend the 4th International Management Convention-IMC’2014- ‘The Business of Being in Business: New Prospective’ at ASBM. NEWS FROM NETWORKS

EFMD, Brussels, Belgium

At the 2014 EFMD Deans & Director General Conference in Gothenburg, EFMD officially launched BSIS - Business School Impact Survey.
“BSIS is a vital addition to the EFMD portfolio of services as it provides a process and tool to capture the value that a school brings to a defined region. It is a service for any business school anywhere in the world that is interested in collecting key statistical data on its impact. Once collected this information can then be used both internally and externally with key stakeholders to widen the debate about “the role of business schools in society” and showcase the enormous added value and impact they bring to a community, said Prof Eric Cornuel, CEO & Director General of EFMD.”

The BSIS scheme identifies the tangible and intangible benefits that a business school brings to its local environment.

“Demonstrating the many ways in which they add economic and social value to the environment in which they operate has become a challenge for business schools. To meet this demand for greater accountability, BSIS is an effective tool to help schools identify, measure and communicate all the positive contributions they make to the world around them,” added Prof. Gordon Shenton, Senior Advisor, EFMD.

At a time when all organisations, public or private, are being held accountable for their activities, there is a need to demonstrate the impact that they are having on their immediate environment.

If you would like further information or are interested in your school taking part you can visit www.efmd.org/bsis or please contact: Gordon SHENTON: gordon.shenton@efmd.org, Michel KALIKA: michel.kalika@efmd.org or bsis@efmd.org

A Review of

“Supply Chain Management and Organizational Performance in Pakistan and India: Strategy and Innovation Aspects” A Doctoral Study by Dr Muhammad Shakeel Sadiq Jaja, Commonwealth-AMDISA Doctoral Fellow, Assistant Professor, Institute of Business Administration, Karachi

By: Dr Shaukat A Brah, Rector and Dean, Karachi School for Business & Leadership, Stadium Road, Karachi.
Introduction

The study looks at a couple of dimensions of a supply chain management: strategy and innovation, and seeks to establish a relationship with performance. This fellowship report looks at the theoretical proposition and the empirical investigation of the two aspects of the supply chain management and their impact on performance.

The report provides a good literature review of the survey research. It proposes two models of supply chain management follows with items generation, pre-testing, and data collection through mass mailing of a survey questionnaire, statistical analysis, and theoretical discussion. The research reports results of the data collected from 296 relevant managers of Pakistani and Indian companies from various industrial sectors.

The paper uses statistical analysis software for data management, preliminary quantitative analysis, and hierarchical regression analysis. The author uses structural equation modeling for hypotheses testing. The research method sections follow standard guidelines from the literature for the measurement model and structural model estimations in the two essays.

The report presents a macro theoretical framework to propose linkages among supply chain strategy, internal and external organizational functions, and performance constructs to address the gaps in supply chain strategy research. The report limits the research scope to the theoretical development and empirical investigation of the impact of supply chain strategy on internal operational functions (Essay 1), and product innovation potential of buyer-supplier relationship (Essay 2) that in turn impact various buyer performance constructs.

Essay 1: Supply Chain Strategy, Core Operations and Performance

First essay in the report proposes a theoretical model linking supply chain strategy, core operation function and performance. The author argues for a positive impact of a balanced supply chain strategy on internal operational functions. This in turn, it is argued, positively impact the construct of organizational performance.

The study of the author finds literature support for supply chain strategy constructs. The supply chain strategy construct developed in the study presents a balanced approach adapted from earlier studies supporting order winner and order qualifier philosophy. The author reports that many studies argue for cost and quality as order qualifier and responsiveness as an order winner. Moreover, the author argues that a large number of empirical studies find top management support as a critical factor for the success of a strategic plan. He concludes that the data in the current study supports the three constructs.

The study finds supply chain strategy has a positive impact on customer focus, product development, information technology, process management, and production technology. This implies supply chain focused firms seem to develop core operational capabilities to achieve supply chain goals. These findings are congruent with an understanding that strategically focused firms are better at developing their core capabilities to achieve long term competitive advantage.

The empirical study shows supply chain strategy with a balanced focus on cost, quality and responsiveness, and support from top management, positively impacts internal functions of customer focus, information technology, process management, production technology, and new product development process. Also, the study finds all internal functions, with the exception of information technology, impact organizational performance in four areas - operational, quality, market, and financial.

The essay discusses the theoretical and managerial implications and provides a potential explanation for the lack of support of the impact of information technology on organizational performance. The essay concludes that alignment in supply chain strategy and internal operational functions leads to better performance and proposes directions for future research.

Essay 2: Buyer Supplier Relationship, Product Innovation and Performance

The second essay focuses on the innovation aspect of the supply chain strategy, buyer-supplier relationship and business performance. The author argues that supply chain innovation strategy provides the basis to develop supplier focus, buyer-supplier innovation intent, and buyer-supplier innovation structure. This in turn positively impact buyer product innovation. Further, the model argues for a positive impact of product innovation on the business performance in terms of quality, market, and financial aspects.

This paper seeks endorsement from existing supply chain and innovation management research to propose theoretical linkages among supply chain innovation focus, buyer-supplier relationship for innovation, entailing supplier focus, buyer-supplier innovation intent, and buyer-supplier innovation structure, product innovation and market and financial performance.

The model finds an overall significant positive support from the data with the use of structural equation modeling. Moreover, the essay explores the association between organizational demographics and product innovation using hierarchical regression analysis. The report goes on to discuss the demographics analysis findings in the emerging economies context.

The essay uses the findings to discuss the theoretical implications and managerial utility of the research. It finds strong support for the proposition of supply chain innovation strategy enhancing innovation potential of buyer-supplier relationship. This in turn positively impacts product innovation, leading to improved business performance. The essay concludes with some ideas to extend the research.

Conclusions

The report reviews the operations management literature to propose the relationships among these constructs. The findings of the empirical study that are based on the data from Pakistan and India and Pakistan confirm the validities and reliabilities of the constructs using confirmatory factor analysis.

The results of full structural equation model suggest that supply chain strategy guides the internal operations as well as innovation orientation of buyer supplier relationship. Hence, the report validates the idea that supply chain strategy has a significant impact on supply chain structure. Moreover, findings suggest that buyer and supplier functions stemming from supply chain strategy impact many areas of buyer performance.

The report brings forward the necessary clarity from a theoretical as well as a managerial stand-point as to what constitutes supply chain strategy and how various dimensions of supply chain strategy impact buyer performance through internal and external supply-chain structure. The author proposes many ideas for future research including further validation of constructs and additional data from the region and beyond.

Overall, the study makes significant contribution to the body of literature in the supply chain management. It provides useful insights for the linkage between the supply chain strategy and performance, and product innovation and performance. The study provides good insights into the South Asian market. Perhaps, there is a need to extend it to other regions. Moreover, there is a need for more work to strengthen the constructs of the model.
